Just one year after the official presentation of the 33-metre T115 New, Terranova Italian Yachts is now ready to join the upcoming Cannes Yachting Festival with two new models: the T74 and the T92.

The Italian shipyard manufactures and markets displacing trawlers ranging from 21 to 31 metres all around the world by promoting a philosophy that perfectly reflects his owner's personality. Massimiliano Zilioli has, in fact, accustomed us to his volcanic being, so we're not really surprised about the ability of the company to pop ut innovation and new models over and over again.

The T115 New, well-shown in the covering photo, reflects the ability to combine all the shipyard's genius and style in a classic simple traditional trawler. Luxury well-refined interiors frame a boat that finally introduces a modern style without style exaggerations or shocks.

Designed by the architect Annalisa Marzorati in collaboration with Barracuda Studio (Madrid), the T115 New can sail at a crusing speed of 12 knots. Thanks to a great range, the boat even guarantees ocean crossings.

But that's the last year's model. Now, we're are really curious and we look forward to see what these new creations, the T74 and the T92, can offer. Unfortunately, however, no detail or rendering has been unveiled yet (except for the two drawings included in this article) and their worldwide debut will take place only at the next Cannes Yachting Festival.

So, we just have to wait some weeks before visiting Terranova Yachts' stand (Booth number SyE232) and find out the surprises brought by these two new models.
